"KEATING'S LOZENGES."
"KEATING'S LOZENGES."

"A SIMPLE FACT ABOUT" KEATINGS COUGH LOZENGES. Ask throughout the world, in any country that can be named, you will find them largely sold. There is absolutely no remedy that is so speedy in giving relief, so certain to cure, and yet the most delicate can take them.

"A TERRIBLE COUGH."
"A TERRIBLE COUGH."

"94, Commercial Road, Peckham, July 12.

"Dear Sir,—I am a poor hand at expressing my feelings, but I should like to thank you. Your lozenges have done wonders in relieving my terrible cough. Since I had the operation of 'Tracheotomy' (the same as the late Emperor of Germany, and unlike him, thank God, I am still alive) performed at St. Bartholomew's Hospital, no one could possibly have had a more violent cough; it was so bad at times that it quite exhausted me. The mucus, which was very copious and hard, has been softened, and I have been able to get rid of it without difficulty.—I am, Sir, yours truly, J. HILL.

UTTERLY UNRIVALLED.
UTTERLY UNRIVALLED.

The above speaks for itself. From strict inquiry it appears that the benefit from using Keating's Cough Lozenges is universal. The sensation was a specially severe one, and we are informed by the specialist, Mr. T. Hutchinson of St. Bartholomew's Hospital, that Keating's Lozenges is the only means of relief is the use of these Lozenges, to such relief are they that one affords immediate benefit, although from the nature of the case the throat irritation is intense.

WEIGHT IN GOLD.
WEIGHT IN GOLD.

Under date Sept. 5th, 1891, Mr. Hill again writes: "I should have omitted that for your Lozenges—THEY ARE WORTH THEIR WEIGHT IN GOLD. I will always use and tell anyone what a splendid cough remedy they are."

Keating's Cough Lozenges, the unrivalled remedy for COUGH, HOARSENESS and THROAT TROUBLES, are sold in Boxes by All Chemists.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE

FRIDAY EVENING, AUG. 11.

FOLLOWING further withdrawals of half a million of Gold from the Bank of England on Wednesday; a decline of ⅛ per cent. in Consols; and a material rise in the market rates of discount; a telegram to hand through Reuter late last evening reported the advance of one per cent. in the Bank of England rate, making it stand at 4 per cent. The usual London financial telegram to hand this morning through the same medium, quotes Consols unchanged yesterday at 98; but Indian Sterling Loan ¼ per cent. lower, at 107½. Another quarter of a million of Gold was withdrawn from the Bank of England (making £1,350,000 taken this week, or £3,400,000 since the drain began at the beginning of last week. The market rates of discount were again put up ¼ per cent. on short London Bills, and 3-8 on six months' sight Indian Bank Paper, say, to 3¾ and 4 per cent., respectively. Bar Silver further advanced in value ¼d. to 34¼d. per oz.; and in New York, the metal was 2¢ cents dearer at 77¼ cents per oz.; with demand Exchange on London half a cent higher, at 4·88¼ cents. Four per cent. Rupee Securities were 3-16 per cent. lower in London, at £68 15-16. The Exchange Banks' buying rate on London, at 30 days' sight, remained at 1s. 3¼d. The weekly shipments of Specie to India consisted of £80,000 in Silver, and £20,000 in Gold all to this port. Coal Freight from Cardiff to Bombay is quoted by Reuter at 9s. per ton. Paris quotations come unaltered, at 99 for Rentes; and fcs. 25,32½ Paris Exchange on London.

The weekly Returns of the Bank of England, issued yesterday in London show that a decrease of 3 per cent. had taken place during the week in the Reserve, which thus stood at 43 per cent. of the Liabilities.

The Liverpool Cotton Market closed quiet last evening, Surats quiet; and Arrivals quiet but steady; the day's sales having aggregated 12,000 bales; East Indians nil. The price of spot Mid. Americans remained at 4 7-16d. per lb.; and Surats were all unchanged in value; but American Arrivals were 1-64d. to 1-32d. higher, the extreme quotations being 4 5-16d. for August-September deliveries, and 4 11-32d. for December-January. The day's Imports were 3,000 bales. The Manchester Market was firm.

In New York, the price of ready Mid.-Uplands declined 1-16 cent to 7 11-16 cents; and September Futures were 11 points lower at 7·42 cents. The day's Receipts at the U. S Ports were 2,000 bales.

A Reuter's telegram from Washington under yesterday's date advises that the Agricultural Bureau monthly report states that the average condition of the crop in eleven Cotton States is 80 3-8 per cent.; which compares with 82 11-16 per cent., which was the condition in July; 83·3 per cent. in August last year; and 87·4 per cent. the average in this month for five years. It is further stated that the early rain and drought in last month are responsible for the present condition of the crop.

To-day has been an entire blank in Cotton business here, not a single transaction either for export or local consumption having been reported. The tone of the market has been quiet; but prices show no change.

WHEAT and SEEDS have also both been quiet markets, the amount of export business passing in the former having been small, and in the latter moderate; but prices of all descriptions are still unchanged.

The Receipts of Produce into Bombay, yesterday, were as follows:—

Cotton	1,044	bales.
Wheat	8,151	owts.
Linseed	1,753	"
Rapeseed	5,482	"
Castorseed	1,907	"
Rice	24,823	"

FREIGHTS remain dull in the continued absence of enquiry for tonnage, no fresh business having transpired again to-day.

EXCHANGE opened with a weak feeling at 1s. 3 3-8d. and 1s. 3 7-16d. for Bank Telegraphic and Demand, respectively, and remained thereat all day without any business being reported of any importance; and for three months' sight Credits, the ready rate has been 1s. 3 11-16d., and next year 1s. 3¾d., with the same result. We hear that the importation of Bar Silver has again revived to a considerable extent (no further mention having been made lately with regard to an import duty in that metal) the proceeds of which, as we stated before, more than suffice for trade requirements at present, without any addition of Council Bills; and the demand for remittance against it in cover, in the absence of many export Bills, naturally has a tendency to weaken rates which closed as follows:—

Bank Bills on Demand	1s. 3 7-16d.	per rupee.
Do. Telegraphic	1s. 3 3-8d.	"
Do. 3 months' sight	1s. 3 9-16d.	"
Credits 3 do.	1s. 3 11-16d.	"

for ready business: forward Telegraphic being quoted at 1s. 3 7-16d. to ½d.; and Credits for 1894, at 1s. 3¾d.

GOVERNMENT PAPER opened at 107 3-16 for Fours for Money; and 107 for Account; but the market has been closed this afternoon on account of the disturbances in the Native Town; and this also has been the case with the Share Market.

He did not expect to give perfect satisfaction to the claimants, as he must consider the taxpayers, but Government, he said, would do something to meet the demands of the service, and further measures might be taken hereafter.

His Lordship said it was impossible to see precisely the result of the Indian Currency measures, and great caution was therefore necessary before increasing the financial burdens of the country.

THE CHARGES AGAINST THE HIMALAYA BANK OFFICIALS.

The enquiry before the District Magistrate, at Debra Dun, into the charges against the officials of the Himalaya Bank, was resumed on Thursday. The Public Prosecutor first called Arthur Sells, now accountant, Mussooree Branch, Alliance Bank, and formerly assistant, Himalaya Bank, for eleven years, under Moss. He acted as Accountant for part of 1890, while Moss was in Australia. He described his duties and identified Moss in the Court, and said that he was familiar with Moss's handwriting. He identified Greenway in the court who was in the Bank before he was. He said he was familia with Greenway's handwriting. He was well acquainted with the books of the Bank and identified the Directors' minute bookkept from 19th April, 1890 to 17th July, 1891. The minute questions to be put to Moss prior to his relieving Greenway was wholly in Greenway's writing, and signed by Wilson, Munton and Captain Leahy. Vansittart read out rapidly the whole minute questions which related to some thirty-nine accounts of debtors apparently bad or doubtful, also to reserve fund, also to deposits in the Mussoorie and Upper India Banks, also to life policies and loans made to the Bank servants, also to Moss having written off in April, 1890, just before going on leave, sums owing by five debtors amounting to Rs. 1,35,229. Witness then proved and explained the vouchers from which entries were made in the ledgers all except perhaps two initialled by Greenway or Moss, and turned up in the ledgers themselves entries so made, and fifty-seven interest sheets and other vouchers for the year 1890 were gone through in detail and proved and checked by the profit and loss ledgers. Sell's evidence occupied the court the whole day.

VANITY FAIR.

(FROM OUR LADY CORRESPONDENT).

LONDON, JULY 20.

This week a little revival of the excitement of the Royal Wedding days has been brought about by the exhibition of the wedding gifts at the Imperial Institute, South Kensington. Those who remember the agonies of suffering through which they went in the effort to see the Jubilee presents will appreciate the comparative comfort in which the present inspection can be made. It is possible that in the morning when the doors are open free, that there may be ground for grumbling at the arrangements which allow but one row of people a view of the presents, yet obliges all to pass along at the same time. In the afternoon, however, there is very little to complain of. The shilling entrance fee limits the crowd to respectable proportions, and a fair time can be spent in the inspection, if one has courage to disregard the constant and distressing monotone of the officials on duty—exhorting, commanding, entreating the spectators to move on "Pars along ladies and gentlemen, pars along—keep a moving—if you can't see it now, you can another time," with which delusive hope we were obliged to be content. Who would begin again at the end of the long hot queue for the sake of a second sight of even a princess's wedding presents?

Still they were in their way well worth looking at. Of the cases of glittering jewelry it would be impossible to give a description. More striking in design than the diamond necklace given by Her Majesty the Queen, is one of diamonds and pearls united—the pearls hanging in beautiful oval drops from their diamond setting. The predominance of turquoise in many of the gifts was remarkable. It is said to be in fashion perhaps because so few stones harmonize with the light blue materials which are in favour for evening wear. After the personal ornaments, which were of interest more for their value than for their intrinsic beauty or novelty, the chief things were silver and gold services for the breakfast, dinner, and tea table, candelabra, and salvers. There were among these an infinity of salt cellars in all shapes, some made in the shape of silver shells and others in the design of tiny yachts with sails set, which were unique and beautiful. Like the Transatlantic bride who received all the flat-irons on her wedding day, the Duchess of York has also been entirely overstocked in toast racks by the solicitude of her friends. To live up to those toast racks would necessitate a diet for life of that ascetic and unfascinating comestible and a right royal digestion.

Screens formed a principal feature among the larger objects of furniture. Mostly in the gilt and brocade style of Louis XV., they were not specially remarkable for beauty. Fans also were very much in evidence, and some, especially the lace ones mounted on ebony or tortoise-shell inlaid with diamonds, were uncommonly beautiful. A toilette table and a washingstand made in porcelain, beautifully hand-painted in a design of pink and white roses, poetically described as the marriage of the roses, was a rare and costly present given by co-operation of the potters' trades. In form the shapes of a shell were used, and behind the curves were concealed electric lights which with a touch of the finger illuminated it like magic and made it a fairy dressing table such as princesses used in the long long ago of our childhood. A four-in-hand pony trap, and harness, natural leather and brass, the gift of the gentlemen of the Household, was also a charming present. Various handsome pieces of furniture, massive chairs, pretty bookcases, innumerable clocks with prevent princely dilatoriness, dinner services with honi soit qui mal y pense written large around the border, decanters, case bottles, liqueur cases of strange device, a couple of ducks with silver heads instead of stoppers, umbrellas, curtains, sticks, whips, and hunting crops, everything almost that could be desired was provided by the well-wishers of the Royal couple.

A very interesting collection of prints of the Queen's coronation and marriage, the christening of the Princess Royal, and the wedding of the Prince of Wales was also given to the bride and bridegroom. Portraits of her Majesty and Prince Albert, of the Prince and Princess of Wales, and of the Duchess of Teck painted as a child with a dog by Landseer (the gift of Baron Rothschild), various views of the White House Richmond, and several pictures, the origin of the harp by Thaddeus, an Arab by Carl Haag, and a large portfolio of water-colours were also included in the remarkable and valuable list of wedding presents.

The spirit of the old rhymer who coupled women with spaniels and cherry trees in their need for whipping is reincarnated in Mr. Coventry Patmore. But the birch rod of olden times is exchanged for the lash of the critic's tongue—an instrument of punishment quite as severe if more in keeping with the prevailing desire for fair play and equality. Mr. Patmore says in his Religio Poetæ many things that will be hard reading to people who believe that all things are possible to women. But it will be entirely pleasant to the average man who believes in his right to supremacy over his womankind—the man who talks of Adam's rib and feminine submission, &c. &c.—things that women in their newfound independence are apt to disregard or altogether to set at naught as old-fashioned. According to Mr. Patmore:

"To maintain that man and woman are equals in intelligent action is just as absurd as it would be to maintain that the hand that throws a ball and the wall that casts it back are equal. The woman has an exquisite perception and power of admiring all the man can be or do. She is 'the glory' of his prowess and nobility in war, statesmanship, arts, invention, and manners; and she is able to fulfil this, her necessary and delightful function, just because she is herself nothing in battle, policy, poetry, discovery, or original, intellectual or moral force of any kind."

This kind of thing reads very well, but when we look around, it seems as if the women Mr. Patmore describes are not our womenkind. They are of a generation that has passed away—those women whose object in life it was to wave the laurels or swing the censer before their hero and their idol, man; and Mr. Patmore, happy in the possession, perhaps, of a few lingering specimens of the adoring kind has not noticed any difference. Or if the change has come under his perception in the police or divorce court reports of the daily papers, he is ready to attribute it not to women's desire to assert her independence so much as to man's laxity in putting her down. Mr. Patmore says:—

"Most of the failures in marriage come of the man's not having manhood enough to assert the prerogatives which it is the woman's more or less secret delight to acknowledge. She knows her place, but does not know how to keep it unless he knows it also; and many an otherwise amiable woman grows restless and irritable under the insupportable doubt as to whether she has got her master. In order to put the question to the test, she does things she knows he is bound to resist or resent, in the hope of being put down with a high hand, and perhaps a bad word or two—since even the mildest corporal chastisement has gone out with the heroic days of such lovers as Siegfried and Kriemhild."

We hardly dare to suggest that Mr. Coventry Patmore is behind the times, but it is the only explanation for the notions of what married women like—which are drawn rather from the heroic days of Siegfried and Kriemhild, or from the sensational stories of how men in Shakespeare's time tamed their shrews than from the object lessons in domestic life which are being given gratis every day to all who will attend to them. Mr. Patmore also gives a poetically beautiful definition of the difference between love and friendship. He says:—

"Friendship and love differ mainly in this: that, whereas the felicity of friendship consists in a mutual interchange of benefits, intellectual and otherwise, that of love is in giving on the one part and receiving on the other, with a reciprocal perception of how sweet it is to the one power to confer and the receiver to receive. This relation involved, as ancient philosophers and theologians have observed, a certain opulence on the one side and a corresponding destitution on the other—a destitution which, however, is the greatest opulence in the eyes of the former as being the necessary condition of his proper delight, which is to endow. The myth of King Cophetua and the Beggar-maid is representative of the most perfect nuptial relationships.

If King Cophetua was a myth in Mr. Patmore's eyes—still more unsubstantial are his imitators—otherwise why has society framed laws to protect its womankind married and single? Mr. Patmore would probably lay the blame of the present state of things on woman for forsaking her proper sphere of being man's "glory" and on man for allowing her to do so—a dual guiltiness for which in future papers he will probably chastise them.

"Woman is not undeveloped man but diverse," we are told, still they have many tastes in common. The Countess of Wilton, for instance, is an enthusiastic fisherman, or angler to be more correct. It is said that she is specially fond of barbel fishing, and that she spends her time at Marlow where there is a marvellous mill pool where she has great success—especially (they say) when it is well baited in advance of the Countess's coming—but this is probably a jealous addition of the disappointed male anglers.

In a different line of work another well-known woman is preparing to surprise us. Mrs. Arthur Stannard (John Strange Winter) who has hitherto written mostly of soldiers and children, and such light subjects has just finished a novel with a theological tendency. It is said that she has expended infinite pains on the story and re-written it several times; it is also said that the theology has been according to the declaration of an expert, found irreproachable. The prevalence of the religious novel epidemic suggests a new employment for University men—curates, &c., out of work—consulting theologists to novelists whose other matter has not been religiously inclined.

TABLE TALK.

BY WALTER BESANT.

Some Mediæval Traveller—was it Mandeville?—after telling of the people who have but one eye in the middle of the forehead, and of those whose heads are in their breast, and of those who have but one leg, with an enormous boot, which they use (lying on their backs) as a sunshade in the heat of the day; and of the big black beast, with a tail at either end of him; and of the monologising Phœnix; and of the cool and curious Salamander, who rejoices in the furnace, and loves to swim in the molten iron; goes on, if I remember rightly—but I have not books with me—to speak of a people who religiously slam their doors. They slam, he says, as a sacred ceremony. Those are the most holy who slam the loudest, insomuch that an archbishop can be heard from end to end of the city, while even a Sunday school girl, if she is good, may bring resonance to a whole block. He who slams with faintness among this people arrive at the title of Sword of Religion, Ox-goad of Religion, Shield of Religion (Salah ed Deen), Light of Religion (Noor ed Deen), or Tenterhook of Religion (Feraz ed Deen.) The country next to those who slam is inhabited by those who Ring. But do not confuse this land with the Ile Sonnante of Rabelais—quite a different country. The Americans—though history refuses to bear out this theory—must be descended from a union of these two nations. Because they slam—slam—slam. All the time, in train and tram, in boat, in house, they slam; on every door, for certainty of slam, an unrelenting coil of spring they jam; as they enter and depart so they slam; old and young, and youth and maid and baby, slam; with a snap like an oyster or a clam; with explosion like the bursting of a dam; with volleys as of million rifle fire; with echoes rolling further, wider, higher. No one heeds it; no one shrieks, no one swears, though it thunders, beats, and bangs about his ears. On the boat and in the train and in the tram, day and night, with scrupulosity they slam, or they ring—and ring—and ring—and ring the bell; the engine when it starts rings the bell; when it slows and when it stops it rings the bell; the land is always saddened by that knell; the cars electric never stop the bell; the horse team clears the way with the bell; from early morn till midnight we can tell the going and the coming by the bell; every clock on every steeple has a bell; and the ringle, tingle, tingle, sharp and clear, and the thunder of the superstitious slam, with agony neurotic strike the ear; till the stranger longs to scream and writhe and—pray; saying "Oh! My brothers—if it may be—oh! Refrain, in house, and boat, and tram, and railway train, from the ringing of the bell and from the slam; from the tolling of the locomotive knell; from the tintinnabulation of the bell and the thunders and the volleys of the slam." I wish I had with me the mediæval pilgrim who suggested the above.

If imitation is a form of flattery I ought to be flattered, for a Boston publisher presents me with a book, in which the writer simply copies—not, it is true, word for word, but in substance—the action of a heroine of my own creation. Thank you, madam. I am flattered. What, however, is ascription? In a certain journal of a certain city, where I stayed a day or two, I found the following:

Not very long ago Rotten Row was the meeting place of all that was fine and smart in the town of London. Society rode and drove and walked and sat every day in the park, morning and afternoon, at the regulation hours, twelve to two and five to seven. Not so to-day (writes Mr. Besant); Society has no time to spend in this manner and in this place, capricious fashion has decided against it. There is no promenading or sitting to speak of in the park on weekdays.

Now, I have never said anything of the kind. These words are put into my mouth in sheer, wanton untruthfulness. To the best of my belief, I never wrote, anywhere, anything about Rotten Row. But what do they do it for? Cannot we protect ourselves somehow or other from foolish or injurious reports of things never said? What follows has perhaps been said before over and over again. America and England are like each other in all their ways, and yet unlike. In everything, however small, there is a touch of dissimilarity. Once understand this, and one understands how ridicule may be heaped and piled by an English traveller upon America, or by an American traveller upon England. For instance, the American traveller observes that our people talk thick while he talks clear; that we use words together while he keeps them apart. "Listen!" he cries. "Don't laugh at them more than you can help. But listen." Then he observes that if you order dinner at an English hotel they don't bring it all at once as at home, but in separate relays or courses, and slowly. "Look!" he cries. "Don't laugh out loud, but look." Then, while at home, he sees the Stars and Stripes flying from every other house, and hears every day some anniversary exhortation to patriotism; in England there is never a word said about the Flag or the Country. "Poor creatures!" he says; "no doubt they are right in being ashamed of their island!" And then, while he cheerfully gives four and twenty hours to get from one place of business to another, the Englishman grudges the five hours between Liverpool and London. "How can they help it?" he says; "one long step and they are in the sea." And, again, the Englishman knows absolutely nothing about America's greatest men, the Governor, the Attorney-General, the great Preacher—of his own State. "Insular ignorance and self-conceit!" he says. Or, again, while he feels that the voice of the people lifts his own great men—himself, too, perhaps—to giddy heights entirely in consequence of personal merits, the national distinctions of the country are over the men for whose sake England is honoured by the outside world, and go for the most part to the men who make money. "Degraded country!" he cries. "Look at us." And so on. The very case of the thing tempts me, while actually receiving the hospitality of the people, to shower ridicule upon them—a temptation which has not always been resisted. But the little things are so very, very little; and the big things are so very, very great; and, when we have grinned our best, this most noble country, which has hardly, as yet, entered upon the fruits of its labours, remains—imperial, calm, and confident.

The little things are very little. For instance, a chapter of accidents such as happened to two Englishmen yesterday is a little thing. It would not have happened in our own country because there are responsible guards, station masters, policemen, and railway porters—because the service is efficient. Things happened as follows: First, the hotel clerk, who is expected to be an encyclopædia, put those two Englishmen in an early and slow train, when a later one would have done a great deal better. They breakfasted at half-past six, when one can take nothing but a cup of tea and a roll. They took tickets in the drawing-room car—"Wagner vestibuled buffet, dining, and sleeping car"—with the assurance of the ticket clerk, the guard at the gate, the drawing-room car conductor, and the Coloured Gentleman, that there would be lunch and dinner provided en board. About one o'clock they began to feel inclined for the former meal, and cheerfully debated the chance of getting Milwaukee beer or only iced water. The Coloured Gentleman, on being invited to show the way to the cold spread, replied that there was no dining car, but that one would be put on at Albany, i.e., at three p. m.—rather late for lunch after a breakfast so early. On arrival at Albany it was found that no dining car was put on, but that thirty minutes were allowed for lunch. The two Englishmen therefore proceeded to the dining-rooms. On their way the conductor of the train—"Only two minutes to spare," he cried. So the travellers snatched a sandwich and rushed back, just in time. Came along the Coloured Gentleman. "Never mind," he said, consolingly, "we stop twenty minutes at Syracuse at seven; that jes' right for supper." At Syracuse the same story—a few minutes to get a sandwich and a cup of coffee. Finally, these two Englishmen reached their station at midnight in a state of inanition. The American, who knows exactly what may happen, brings a comfortable luncheon-basket on board, and is not starved.

I hope that a vast number of readers will go to Chicago because—although I have not yet reached that place—there is but one voice about it, and that voice is loud in praise. Here are a few solid rules for the masculine traveller. (1) Have only one strong leather trunk, big enough to hold everything. Light and small trunks suffer horribly from the banging. (2) Keep with you for daily use a handbag big enough to hold a book or two, tobacco, a pocket flask, night things, and the little things always wanted. (3) Bring your own tobacco; don't forget matches; don't expect Scotch whiskey; drink very little wine or beer, because in this dry and stimulating air you do not want half so much wine as you take at home. (4) Don't ask your way of the casual passenger, but of the policeman. (5) Don't rave and storm if things go a little wrong. (6) Find out as quickly as you can the "check" system of baggage; and (7) on a long journey don't forget the luncheon basket.

Let us copy whatever we can in the way of convenience and comfort; let us plagiarise, steal, imitate, convey, utilise whatever the wit of man in other countries has devised for the saving of trouble. Let the chief duty of the traveller, who is no longer a traveller geographical, scientific, ethnologic, exploratory, or linguistic, become a collector of devices and crafty inventions for creature comforts. Here is one of my contributions—expect many more. In America you can buy railway tickets entitling you to so many miles—e.g., you may buy a book of a Thousand Miles. In every journey the guard punches off so many until the book is exhausted. No tickets; no fighting round a wired hole; nothing but to give the guard a book and request him to punch. Let us adopt this method as quickly as possible. Consider the convenience. You buy a Household Book—say a Five Hundred Mile Book—your daughter goes a journey, fifty miles there and back. You tear out a fifty miles bit, and give it to her. Your nephew visits you. On going away he gets, as a present, a hundred mile ticket. Your friend's daughter is married. Wedding present, a Five Thousand Mile Railway Book—a thing which will last them twenty years, with economy. The ramifications of this plan—its possibilities, its splendours—I must leave to the reader's imagination. But it must be adopted. I fully expect, on returning home, to find it in full swing. Put me down, Mr. Secretary of the Railway Mile Book Association (incorporated with all the Companies) for a Book of Ten Thousand Miles, and buy me, Mr. Longtape, of Austin Friars, two or three shares in two or three companies, because the shares will all go up, and, armed with our books, we shall go scouring up and down the face of the earth, travelling, exploring, investigating. Out of the colossal dividends I shall buy shares in hotels, in local tramways, in country theatres, in bathing machines, in breweries, in everything that a phenomenal increase in travellers will create and demand. Then I shall not envy even a citizen of Buffalo his riches, and I shall go in silk raiment and walk delicately, and write no more novels.

THE COLABA SHONE SEWAGE SCHEME.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "BOMBAY GAZETTE."

SIR,—Mr. Wallace's letter on the above subject requires some explanation and amplification. Why he should have headed his letter "The Insanitary Shone System" I cannot for the life of me imagine, because if he were put the question straight, I have no doubt his reply would be that "it is a far more sanitary system than that of gravitation sewers, and that it is the only system of drainage possible for Colaba."

First, as to any smell from the station ejectors as compared with existing sewers. The ejectors are placed at separate stations about half a mile apart. The Queen's Road sewer is 2 feet 6 inches wide. A half-mile length of this sewer will, therefore, have a surface area of 6,600 square feet. The diameter of a Shone's ejector pump is six feet equal to twenty-eight square feet, and therefore the amount of possible contamination with the external air (other things being equal) is 235 times as great in the Queen's Road sewer as in a Shone's ejector. It is, of course, understood that the Shone sewage pipes are of cast-iron, running full bore at quick speed under pressure, and that the only surface having any possible communication with the open air is the ejector, this being of course an immense improvement upon the sluggish gravitating sewer system, I have said, "(other things being equal)." But other things are not equal. We have, I think, had three explosions of fire damps in the Queen's Road sewer during the past two years, due entirely to the rotting black fetid mud, which has sunk to the bottom of the sewer occupying more than one-half of its height, and which refuses to move on except by mechanical means in which men must be employed up to their waist in sewage, and who by moving about in the sewage stir up the explosive gas. On each explosion the men were injured, while on one occasion three were killed.

Since the Tansa water has been utilized, the mass of sewage in the Queen's Road sewer has so increased, that it has been running full bore, so much so as to make it impossible for the men to enter the sewer. It has been stated that since the new pumps at Love Grove have been at work the velocity of the sewage flow has so increased that the authorities are hopeful that the main sewers will scour themselves clean of silt and mud. It is devoutly to be hoped that it will be so, otherwise there will be no option, but to fix a Shone's sewage pipe with ejectors alongside the Queen's Road sewer from Marine Lines to its junction with the main sewer at Grant Road, and so by diverting the flow, enable the men to enter the sewer and clean it out properly of mud and silt.

But again other things are not equal, because it is not possible to construct a gravitating main sewer on the Apollo Bunder Reclamation and in Colaba. Had this been possible the authorities would have done the work years ago. They were bound to adopt the station ejector system. The only two known systems were the Shone and Baldwin Latham. The former impels the sewage forward by air-pressure, the latter by a water-engine under high pressure somewhat like the pressure used in an hydraulic lift. Our local authorities were originally strongly in favour of Baldwin Latham's system. But the logic of accumulating facts was too strong for them, and they gradually came round to the view that the Shone system was the proper one to adopt. I do not wish to make any invidious comparisons between the two systems, but I must say this much. Shone put down his first installation at Eastbourne, a town belonging to the Duke of Devonshire, in 1880. It was found to be so satisfactory that further installations were put down in 1881, 1884, 1888, and 1892, the last being equal in capacity to all the other four put together. Two installations in 1882 and 1886 have been put down in Warrington, Lancashire, a town which supplies much of the spinning machinery sent to Bombay. Three installations in 1884, 1886 and 1886 in Southampton, also in the National Liberal Club and the Houses of Parliament, London. Twenty separate installations at Chicago commencing in 1888, and ending in 1892 with the World's Columbian Exposition, which is wholly drained on this system. There are also many other installations in England as well as one each in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, and one in Moscow, Russia, for draining the sewage and offal water from the public slaughter-houses. On the other hand, Baldwin Latham's system has been adopted in four or five separate towns in England, but nowhere out of England. In none of these has a second installation been put down, while it is stated, that the cost of coal consumption and skilled atendance is far larger in Baldwin Latham's than in Shone's. The latter run for days together without being looked at, while the former require continuous attention. But the great recommendation of the station ejector system is the simplicity of the drainage arrangements required and the speed with which the sewage is impelled on from station to station. The ejectors being placed at distances not exceeding half a mile apart, there are no deep underground sewers of great length, they are cheap stoneware pipes of small sizes laid a few feet underground at a steep slope not exceeding a quarter of a mile in any direction. As the velocity is great, the sewage rapidly flows along, sticks, cloth, stones, all sorts of debris is carried by the ejector pressure along the main cast-iron pipes, so that the sewage has no time to rot and become foul as in the case of gravitating sewers. The evidence is positive that no smell emanates from the Shone ejectors, for the reasons above given. I will first say in conclusion that Major Tullock, who is the Consulting Engineer of the Bombay Municipality, has been all along a persistent and consistent advocate of the Shone system, also that our late Executive Engineer Mr. Walton, though when in Bombay a stong advocate of Baldwin Latham's system, when he retired and obtained one of the Inspectorships under the local Improvement Act in England, found the facts so unimpeachable in favour of Shone's system, that he wrote to Bombay advising its adoption in Colaba. I have purposely in this letter avoided making any special reference to Shone account of their holidays, but those which were open were at once shut.

SCENES AT PYDHOWNEE.

The alarm caused by the disturbance was so great that even others than Hindus and Mahomedans, ran away. When the police were engaged at Pydhownie and the Martois, the Mahomedans marched to Nisampada, and created a disturbance. They polluted it, and assaulted several Hindus, who were present. The excitement of the Hindus made them reached a crisis, when armed Hindus offered resistance. The Mahomedans then fired the shops of several Hindu grain-dealers, and caused a panic amongst the inhabitants of that locality. They desecrated four Hindu temples, but as the military reinforcement came to the rescue of the Hindus, they retreated hastily. The police made several arrests, and did all they could to disperse the mob. The panic-striken Hindu women cried for the safety of their husbands and children. The Mahomedans battered at the houses of Hindus, and broke the windows on the ground floor and threw showers of stones. Blows with sticks were freely exchanged and several Mahomedans and Hindus were wounded, and bled profusely. The conduct of the police was admirable throughout. Mr. Vincent, who was called to serve means to restore tranquility, received an injury to his right eye by a large stone, which was thrown by some ruffian. The agitation amongst the Mahomedans at Null Bazaar was at its height. Showers of stones fell on the tram-cars, the progress of which had to be ultimately stopped at Pydhownee. After two o'clock no tram was allowed to proceed beyond Pydownee, from whence they returned to Colaba. The whole native community remains in a state of agitation, which is full of danger. The whole road leading from Null Bazaar to Byculla was lined by ruffians, who attacked any whom they happened to meet.

The energies of the police were fully taxed by rioters that sprang up like mushrooms in different parts of the town, and it was found necessary to call in the military Mr. Superintendent Brewin galloped up to Colonel Forjett, Commanding the Marine Battalion, and requested him to send a detachment to restore order amongst the excited mob. Colonel Forjett at once complied with the request, and sent four companies of the Marine Battalion, of the 21st Native Infantry, consisting of 110 native soldiers, under the command of Major Mein and Captain Hammond. Mr. Cooper, Chief Presidency Magistrate, having got intimation of the disturbance at once drove to the spot, and by his order the soldiers marched to Parel Road and dispersed the crowd of ruffians that had collected on the road between the Byculla Head-Police office and Pydhownee, and had taken possession of the whole road. The tram traffic was brought to a stand-still, and nobody was allowed to go along that road except on his own responsibility. No respectable Mahomedan took part in the riot. Soon after the Marine Battalion then marched to the Jail Road, which was filled by the rioters, who freely threw stones inside the jail and into the houses situated in the vicinity of the jail. Mr. Mackenzie, Superintendent, complained that he had nobody to assist him, and that he had with very great difficulty driven off a mob of ruffians. He was assisted only by one European officer. After having encountered the mob, and driven them from near the Jail, the soldiers marched to Kasai Moholla. Before doing so, however, they placed a European police officer and six soldiers to guard the jail. The mob in the Kassaiwada, on seeing the military, quietly dispersed.

Two companies of the 21st Native Infantry remained in Kasai Moholla and Nisanpada Street to preserve order. Three companies, one of eighteen rank-and-file,another of twenty rank-and-file and the third of twenty-one rank-and-file, under the command of Lieutenant Cox, arrived at the Pydownee Police Station, and rendered valuable assistance in dispersing the mob. Colonel Shortland, who is now in command of the District, in the absence of General Budgen, also arrived on the scene, and expressed his desire to call further military reinforcement, if needed, for the safety of the people. Blank cartridge was fired to warn the mob. About 100 men, under the command of Major Mein, were instructed to go to the Byculla Police station, and remain there until further orders.

THE SCENE AT MANDVIE BUNDER.

When Mr. Cooper, Mr. Vincent, and Mr. Acworth passed along Nissanpada Street the Hindus appealed them to protect them, bringing to their notice the fact of their temples being desecrated and their shops plundered. They consoled the afflicted Hindus, advising them to be pacified. The scene at Mandvie Bunder was equally pitiable. Nobody dared to go out of his house or open the doors several shops of Hindu grain dealers were plundered by Mahomedans. The police have a hard duty to perform at the risk of their own lives. Several policemen have beenwounded. Mr. Superintendent Brewin deserves the greatest credit for his unflinching courage and untiring energy in putting down the rioters. Messrs. Crummey, MacDermott, Grennan, Sweeney, Jones, Cobb, Hack, Roberts, and all the European police officers are exerting themselves strenuously to restore peace and to check the riot.

SCENE IN THE GOKULDAS TEJPAL HOSPITAL.

THE MILITARY COMPELLED TO FIRE.

ONE RIOTER KILLED.

One of the most distressing scenes was enacted at Two Tanks. Yesterday evening at half-past six Captain Creagh's men were ordered to clear the street at the corner of the Erskine Road, which was occupied by Mahomedans. The soldiers warned the crowd to disperse, but as their order was disregarded they charged, and one man who came right on the top of a bayonet was killed on the spot. The seething mass pressed in on the bayonets and refused to give way. The Mahomedans defied the order and pelted stones at the soldiers, who in their self-defence fired at the mob and wounded six persons. One of them died at the J. J. Hospital. It was rumoured that three more were killed, but the rumour seems to have been unfoundad.

DISTURBANCE AT ERSKINE ROAD.

While Captain Creagh's men were clearing the mob three stalwart Mahomedans excited the mob by crying out "din," "din," and threw stones freely at the police and the military. Two police constables Hardacre and Grennan, caught hold of the trio and locked them up at the Erskine Road chowkey, the glasses of the windows of which had been broken to pieces by the rioters. In the scuffle the policemen received many blows and their arms were injured. The two constables as soon as they took their prisoners—very powerful men who fought with fury and were covered with blood—to the chowkie reported a Mussulman Police Havildar for having incited the mob to attack them with sticks and stones while they were securing their prisoners. The havildar in question was riding a white horse and the constables made the complaint to Colonel Forjett and Mr. Webb in his presence. He denied that he had acted as stated, but the police constable were positive that he acted as they said.

INCREASED EXCITEMENT IN THE EVENING.

In the evening the excitement of the mob grew more and more intense and with it the dimensions of the riots. The streets were crowded by Mahomedans and it was difficult to go beyond Pydhownee. Further military assistance was deemed necessary and the police applied to Colonel Shortland to lend the services of the Lancashire Regiment to restore peace. Before the arrival of the Lancashire Regiment, a detachment of the Marine Battalion, loaded their rifles and went from Pydhownee as far as Null Bazaar, the chief centre of the Mahomedans, asking each of the occupants of the houses to close their windows under threats of firing into them in case of their refusing to comply with the order. Blank cartridge were fired with success. The Mahomedans, who were throwing stones from their windows, had ultimately to shut them. Having succeeded in confining the principal rioters in their houses the soldiers continued to patrol the road.

MAHOMEDAN MOSQUES ATTACKED.

At Cammatipura, the Hindus did not remain on the defensive. It was soon found that they were ready to cope with their enemies at the risk of their lives. They marched in a body to the mosque and besieged it and a free fight ensued between the two hostile parties. Clubs and bamboos were freely used and several heads cut open. The fury of the Mahomedans, however, could not be withstood. They came out with a determination and beat back the Hindus.

About three hundred Municipal scavengers, (men and women) who had assembled as usual in a Municipal shed near the Erskine Road Market, before the commencement of work, found themselves in a fix. On attempting to come out they were attacked by the Mahomedans. Mr. Webb, Second Presidency Magistrate, came to the spot and being informed of the perilous position in which the scavengers were placed sent for police men, who promptly arrived on the spot and relieved the scavengers.

The anxiety and excitement of the people reached the climax, when even Europeans and Parsees were pelted with stones as they passed by the road. The outrages committed by the Mahomedans seemed unprovoked. It is true that Hindus also subsequently became turbulent and this made things worse, increasing the anxiety and work of the Police and the Military.

SCENE AT THE J. J. HOSPITAL.

The harrowing scene, which presented itself on entering the J. J. Hospital, would have moved even a stone-hearted man. The wounded were lying in lines. Their cries and agonies, coupled with their fear for the safety of their children and relations, made the scene a most thrilling one. One man,who had received a gun-shot wound,died at eight o'clock last night. Five more were dying, and about a dozen persons were lying in a very critical condition, there being very little hope of their recovery. The eyes of some men were badly injured. The heads of some were fearfully cut up. Some had broken their arms and legs, while others had been terribly wounded. Dr. Gallagher and his apothecary, Mr. Gazalet, and Mr. Ringrow, and a large number of military students have had a severe task to perform in attending to the injured. In all about one hundred and fifteen were admitted into the Hospital.

THE SCENE AT GRANT ROAD.

At about 7 p.m., a number of Hindoo mill-hands attacked several Mahomedan passers-by at the Grant Road Post Office, but the disturbance was quelled on the immediate arrival of the railway and local police. A Mahomedan was seriously injured. The Post Office had to be closed on account of this affray.

ALLEGED INCENDIARISM.

It is alleged that the Mahomedans, in order to occupy the police in some other business, set fire to a stable, at Sanklia Tank. The stable was completely gutted in a short time, and the progress of the fire was checked by the fire-brigade.

DESTRUCTION OF A HINDU TEMPLE.

At four o'clock the Mahomedan rioters marched to Koombharwada, which is chiefly populated by Hindus, and assaulted everybody who came in their way. They then entered a temple, which they razed to the ground.

ARRIVAL OF THE MAGISTRATES.

The presence of the magistrates was found to be of great service. Mr. Cooper, Chief Presidency Magistrate, Mr. Webb, Second Presidency Magistrate, and Mr. Dastur, Third Presidency Magisrate, arrived on the scene shortly after the disturbances had broken out and rendered valuable assistance by directing the operations of the police and the military. Mr. Cooper remained the whole night at the Pydhownie station. Mr. Webb had to remain at Falkland Road. Mr. Acworth, Municipal Commissioner, was also present until late last night.

THE INJURED POLICE OFFICERS.

Most of the European police officers had been more or less injured by the stones and other missiles which were hurled at them. Stones were thrown at Mr. Crummey and Mr. Nolan who were slightly injured. Inspectors Grey and Butterfield were also injured, Constable Ellis fared rather badly. His jaw was cut up. A number of native police sepoys received nasty wounds.

ARREST OF RIOTERS.

About two hundred persons were arrested by the police with the assistance of the military soldiers. About one hundred and forty were locked up at the Esplanade Police station, while the others were locked up at the Pydhownee and Byculla Police stations.

DISTURBANCE AT CHINCHPOOGLY.

Last night, at 11 o'clock,a report was brought that a disturbance had taken place at Cbinchpoogly between Mahomedans and Hindus. Mr. Crummey and about fifty soldiers ran up to the place only to find that the disturbance had been quelled.

RESTORATION OF ORDER.

Last night at 11 o'clock quiet was restored in almost all the disturbed localities. The roads were patrolled by the military and police officers.

MILITARY ARRANGEMENTS.

In addition to the native soldiers, already on the spot, the Royal Lancashire Regiment from Colaba, under the orders of the Commanding Officer, had arrived on the scene. There were five companies consisting of 600 men under the command of Colonel Railes, Major Jackson, Major de Hoghton, and Captain Churchwood, who arrived at Pydhownee, 300 of the men were sent up to Grant Road, and 300 remained at Pydhownee. At 7-45 p.m. the Royal Artillery arrived with sour guns and eighty men, commanded by Major Symson and Captain Buchanan. Two guns and forty men were directed to remain at Pydhownee, while two guns and the remaining forty men of the Artillery were posted at the junction of the Grant Road and Falkland Road. The Bombay Light Horse, under the command of Lieutenant Cuffe, were on the spot within an hour after an intimation was sent to them by Colonel Shortland, Commanding the District. The Light Horse patrolled all the disturbed localities, and at 11 p.m. when an alarm was raised of a rising at Chinchpoogly, the Commanding Officer of the Light Horse was asked to assist the police in quieting the disturbance. They immediately galloped off to Chinchpoogly, followed by fifty soldiers in tram-cars, which were placed at the disposal of the police and military by Mr. Remington, of the Tramway Company. The disturbance was soon quelled.

Military men, including the Volunteer Light Horse, were on duty all night, and their respective officers as well as Colonel Shortland were with them. No order "to fire" was given by any magistrate to the military. It was deemed necessary for a magistrate to remain on the spot in case of an emergency arising. Mr. Cooper, Chief Presidency Magistrate, was present at the Pydhownee Police Station, and Mr. Webb, Second Presidency Magistrate, was present at Falkand Road up to the small hours of the morning.

To assist the police and the military, Mr. Acworth, the Municipal Commissioner, Mr. Louis P. Russell, and Colonel Shortland were also present with the Chief Presidency Magistrate and the Police Commissioner at the Pydhownee Police Station.

REVIEWS.

"Swimming," by Archibald Sinclair and William Henry (Longmans, Green and Co., 39, Paternoster Row, London, E. C.). The Badminton Library offers to the public a new volume on Swimming as an art and as a pastime. No pains have been spared, and every authority, living or dead, has been ransacked to fill these pages with instructions and interesting facts for the swimmer. The chapter on the teaching of swimming makes it plain that all one has to do is to try the art and succeed. Scientific swimming, diving, plunging and floating,life-saving,water polo, the rules of swimming clubs meetings, the ardour of the Universities and Public Schools in the art : all these points and more are discussed in this volume. It is profusely and conscientiously illustrated by S. T. Dadd, who has made as complete a study as is possible of the different positions of the swimmer. The authors of the text have succeeded in their aim of exhausting the resources of history and contemporary records to give us interesting facts about swimming and its kindred arts. Of diving, much that is new to the general reader has been raked up from reliable sources. Lieutenant Hardy, R. N., who went to Mexico to report upon the coral and pearl fisheries, and who, in order to ascertain correctly the state of the banks, became a diver himself, states that "If it be difficult to learn to swim it is infinitely more so to dive. In my first attempt I could only descend about six feet, and was immediately obliged to rise again to the surface ; but by degrees I got down to two or three fathoms, at which depth the pressure of the water upon the ears is so great, that I can only compare it to a sharp-pointed iron instrument being violently forced into that organ. My stay under water, therefore, at this depth, was extremely short ; but, as I had been assured, that as soon as the ears should burst—as it is technically called by the divers—there would be no difficulty in descending to any depth, and wishing to become an accomplished diver, I determined to brave the excessive pain till the bursting should, as it were, deliver me from a kind of cord, which limited my range downwards in the same way that the ropes of a balloon confine the progress of that machine upwards. Accordingly, taking a leap from the bows of the boat, full of hope and resolution, with my fingers knit together over my head, the elbows straight, and keeping myself steadily in the inverse order of nature—namely, with my feet perpendicularly upwards—the impetus carried me down about four fathoms, when it became necessary to assist the descent by means of the hands and legs. But alas ! who can count on the firmness of his resolution ! The change of temperature from hot to cold is most sensibly felt. Every fathom fills the imagination with some new idea of the dangerous folly of penetrating further into the silent dominions of reckless monsters where the skulls of the dead make perpetual grimaces, and the yawning jaws of sharks and tentereros, or the death embrace of the manta, lie in wait for us. These impressions were augmented by the impossibility of the vision penetrating the gloom in which I was surrounded, together with the excruciating pain I felt in my eyes and ears ; in short, my mind being assailed by a thousand incomprehensible images, I ceased striking with my hands and legs ; I felt myself receding from the bottom ; the delightful thought of once more beholding the blue heavens above me got the better of every other reflection. I voluntarily changed the position of my body, and in the next instant once more found myself on the surface. How did my bosom inflate with the rapid inspirations of my natural atmosphere, and a sensation of indescribable pleasure spread over every part of the body, as though the spirit was rejoicing at its liberation from its watery peril ! In fact, it was a new sensation, which I cannot describe. I did not suffer it, however, to be of long duration. Once more I essayed with a more fixed determination. Again I felt myself gliding through the slippery water which, from its density, gave one the idea of swimming through a thick jelly ; again I experienced the same change of temperature in the water as I de-cended ; and again the agonising sensation in my ears and eyes made me waver. But now reason and resolution urged me on, although every instant the pain increased as I descended, and at the depth of five or six fathoms I felt a sensation in my ears like that produced by the explosion of a gun, at the same moment I lost all sense of pain, and afterwards reached the bottom with a facility which I thought unattainable. I no sooner found myself at the surface again, than I became sensible of what had happened to my eyes, ears, and mouth ; I was literally bleeding from each of these, though wholly unconscious of it." The pearl-fishers of Ceylon seek no assistance from the helmet-dress and air-pump. They work best, i.e., bring up most oysters, when left to their own simple devices. Many pages in this most interesting work are devoted to saving, and full details are given of the best methods of restoring life in those apparently dead when rescued from the water. The illustrations as well as the instructions in this chapter are complete in the minutest as well as the most important points and leave nothing to the imagination in this most useful result of familiarity with water practice.

The Real Thing and Other Tales, by Henry James (Messrs. Macmillan and Co., London). These tales, which appeared first in various periodicals are really perfect analyses of character, drawn as are all Henry James' portraits with the finest camel's hair brush. He gives one almost too faultless a presentation of the person a segment of whose life he wishes to place before us. When we lay down the tale, we feel quite as if we had parted with real living beings whom we had heard speaking, whose every gesture and expression we had followed and understood. Take this description in the first page of "The Real Thing," a most depressingly sad sketch, by the way, "the gentleman, a man of fifty, very high and very straight, with a moustache slightly grizzled and a dark-grey walking-coat admirably fitted, both of which I noted professionally—I don't mean as a barber nor yet as a tailor—would have struck me as a celebrity if celebrities often were striking. It was a truth of which I had for some time been conscious that a figure with a good deal of frontage was, as one might say, almost never a public institution. A glance at the lady helped to remind me of this paradoxical law : she also looked too distinguished to be a personality. Moreover one would scarcely come across two variations together." Well these two variations become models and drive the poor artist frantic. "She sat with great intensity, giving the whole of her mind to it, and was capable of remaining for an hour almost as motionless as if she were before a photographer's lens. I could see she had been photographed often, but somehow the very habit that made her good for that purpose made her unfitted for mine. At first I was extremely pleased with her lady-like air, and it was a satisfaction on coming to follow her lines, to see how good they were and how far they could lead the pencil. But after a few times, I began to find her too insurmountably stiff ; do what I would with it my drawing looked like a photograph or a copy of a photograph. Her figure had no variety of expression, she herself had no sense of variety. You may say that this was my business, was only a question of placing her. I placed her in every conceivable position, but she managed to obliterate their differences. She was always a lady certainly, and into the bargain was always the same lady. She was the real thing, but always the same thing. There were moments when I was oppressed by the serenity of her confidence that she was the real thing. . . . I found myself trying to invent types that approached her own, instead of making her own transform itself—in the clever way that was not impossible, for instance, to poor Miss Churm. . . . After I had drawn Mrs. Monarch a dozen times, I perceived more clearly than before that the value of such a model as Miss Churm resided precisely in the fact that she had no positive stamp, combined of course with the other fact, that what she did have was a curious and inexplicable talent for imitation Her usual appearance was like a curtain which she could draw up at request for a capital performance." Alas these real models very nearly ruin the artist. The other tales in this volume have all a charm of their own, and well repay perusal. If for nothing else—and there is much else—the study of the different and delicate values that Mr. James draws from qualifying adjectives and skilful turns of the sentence open up a new interest in language. It all suggests the most careful and laborious work resulting in a delicate tracery of words to describe what he wants to show us, and is very different indeed to the slipshod, hurried, and commonplace diction indulged in by the greater number of storytellers of the present day.

Chaucer's the Clerke's Tale, with Introduction and Notes, by E. H Elliot, B. A. (Madras : Srinivasa Varadachari and Co). This is a handbook meant for students preparing for examination, especially as this country, where knowledge of English in the native students is necessarily very imperfect. The notes are made as full as possible to meet the requirements of the country student. Mr. Elliot is conscious, that in bringing out this book with such copious annotations, he lays himself open to the charge of encouraging cramming, but he nevertheless is quite content to face his critics with the knowledge that if English boys require books of this kind during their early study of English literature, much more does the native youth need them in his studies in a language to which he is unaccustomed. The text of this edition is an exact reprint of the text in Dr. Skeat's edition of 1891. Mr. Elliott gives an Introduction containing a short account of the Life and Works of Chaucer, and some other preliminary matter, sufficient to interest and instruct the student before he takes up Chaucer, pure and simple. An outline of Chaucer's grammar is to b found in the appendix, where the puzzled reader can seek for explanation of the discarded English, which was good enough in the olden days but now needs a glossary. The annotations, leave nothing unexplained, even "encressed" is translated by "increased" and "Bountee" by "Bounty, goodness," so that the reader of "The Clerke's Tale" can not fail in his paraphrasing for want of full and detailed explanation.

One Thegu Ahir, through his pleader, Babu Harendra Nath Mukerji, moved the Calcutta High Court against the order of the Magistrate of Shahabad convicting his client under sections 224 and 457 of the Indian Penal Code, of escaping from lawful custody and house-breaking by night, and sentencing him to two years' rigorous imprisonment under each count. The Sessions Judge of Shahabad on appeal set aside the conviction and sentence under section 457 of house-breaking by night, but confirmed the conviction and sen ence on the other count. The accused, it appears, was arrested on suspicion for a theft committed in 1890, but he succeeded in escaping from police custody. No trace of his whereabouts could be obtained till January 1893, when he was discovered and re-arrested. He was accordingly placed on his trial, resulting in his conviction. Their Lordships saw no reason to interfere either with the conviction orsentence. The appeal was accordingly rejected.

RUSSIAN VIEWS OF THE COMING WAR.

"From Berlin and Vienna to Petersburg and Moscow and Back," by Antisarmatikus, is the title of a work published in St. Petersburg in 1891, and which has now passed its second edition. The writer has laboriously collected every German pamphlet and newspaper comment bearing on the subject with especial reference to two works by Sarmatikus entitled "The Polish Scat of War," and "From the Weichsel to the Dneiper." The object of the writer is to arouse a spirit of hatred against Germany, to controvert the hopeful views of its people as to a successful issue of a war with Russia, to present the Russian forces in array, and to be bespeak for them in the next campaign an unimpeded "walk-over." At the close of 1892 another Russian writer (Kasak) entered the field with a work entitled "Sarmatikus and Antisarmatikus," in which while upholding his countryman on all points, he claims to present his facts, figures and arguments more systematically. It is well known that Antisarmatikus and Kasak are the pseudonyms of two Russian officers of high standing, animated by hatred against Germany, and seeking to inflame their countrymen with a like sentiment. For the moment the war party, of which they are the mouthpieces, has not the ear of the peaceably disposed Emperor, but the party is a growing one, and their counsels may at any moment prevail. These writers explain away the circummstance which on a few occasions resulted in Russia and France being opposed to each other, asserting that a feeling of hostility between the two races never existed. France and Italy are or have been enemies, only in consequence of misunderstanding, England and Austria are real foes, and all Russia's troubles in the Balkan peninsula are attributed to the policy of Bismarck. "Public opinion is Germany, and especially in Austria, is unqualifiedly hostile to us and designed for the promotion of the programme of Prince Bismarck (that is, to drive Russia back upon Asia). . . . The frustration of this design by peaceable means is impossible. The question, whether Teuton or Slav shall take the first rank in Europe can be decided only by blood and iron, . . . and if the hour of bloody retribution for German hostility should strike sooner than the Western European Powers calculated on, it is not Russia's fault." Such are the sentiments which like a red thread run through the works of both writers, and disclose their party's ambitious designs for the disruption of the German Empire and the Russification of Europe.

Turning now to the military part of the two works, the facts and figures are such as to inspire Germany with the necessity of putting forth all her strength and making the utmost sacrifices to enable her to come out victorious in the struggle with the Russian Colossus. According to Antisarmatikus, the number of men which the Russian War Ministry can call into the field in the case of mobilisation ranges from ten to twelve millions, a number which, he estimates, will render the annihilation of the German army, weakened by the necessity of guarding its numerous fortresses, an easy task. Both the numerical superiority of the Russian army, with its superior readiness for war, and the excellent qualities of her soldiers, are beyond all dispute ; but it is doubtful if these advantages will suffice to equalise the difficulties involved in the enormous extent of the country, the imperfect development of her railway system, and its inadequacy to a rapid mobilisation of her troops. But Russia, which never before entered on a European war for which she was properly prepared, appears to have taken a lesson from the past, and to be making very successful efforts to encounter every natural obstacle and make the most of her resources. Russia is in the fortunate position that she is assailable only on her western frontier, and she has taken advantage of this to mobilise nearly all her troops on that frontier in time of peace. This leaves little incomplete, but admirably strategic system of railways free for the trasport of the men necessary to bring the several regiments up to their full complement. This system of railways must not be undervalued. Eight entirely independent main lines, fed by numerous branches, pass through the heart of the Empire to concentrate themselves on Poland. By means of fortresses and natural barriers (swamps) Russia's whole western frontier is so admirably defended that the perfect mobilisation of her troops and her plan of campaign can be developed in perfect security ; and taking all these matters into consideration there is no escape from the conclusion that Russia can strike when she will, and strike, too, with her whole force.

The outcome of the war, according to Antisarmatikus and Kasak, will be the march of the victorious Russian army on Berlin and Vienna, followed by a Congress at Moscow or St. Petersburg, where terms of peace will be dictated. As a condition of peace Germany must relinquish the right bank of the Weichsel to Russia, the left bank of the Rhine to France. North Schleswig to Denmark, Silesia to Austria (in compensation for Austrian territory ceded to Russia). The German Empire will be disolved, the several States declared independent ; Austro-Hungary will surrender Galicia, Bukowina, Dalmatia, and Hungarian Servia to Russia, together with its rights in Bosnia and Herzegovina. These provinces will be awarded to Servia and Montenegro, and even Roumania may come in for a share, if she behave satisfactorily during the war. Austria must pledge herself to recognise the historic rights of the Kingdom of Bohemia, and to render it autonomous. Russia reserves the right at her good pleasure to enter into treaties with the States of the Balkan peninsula, &c. Well it will hardly go so far Antisarmatikus may rest assured. No one in Germany wants a war with Russia ; we do not make the mistake of underrating her power, and we want no Russian territory. When Sarmatikus proposed the reconstruction of Poland it was only as a defensive matter. But if, in spite of Germany's sincere desire to maintain friendly relations with Russia, the party of Antisarmtikus and Kasak should succeed in influencing the Czar to make war on Germany, they may rest assured that Germany will make every sacrifice to come victorious out of the struggle.—Preussische Jahrbucher.

ANCIENT AND MODERN DENTISTRY.

The utility and importance of the teeth has been known since the advent of man on this planet. Just how much care and attention were given to them in the early ages we may never know. From references in the Bible we must assume that they were regarded with due consideration. While no specific data can be obtained as to the origin of dentistry, we know it was practised among the Egyptians at a very early age. Herodotus (B. c. 500), in writing of his travels through Egypt, at that time one of the greatest and most civilised countries in the world, mentions the division of medicine in that kingdom into special branches, and the existence of physicians, each of whom applies himself to one disease only and not more. Some (physicians) are for the eyes, others for the head, others for the teeth, and others for internal disorders." It is thought that the Egyptians and Etruscans were farther advanced in the art of dentistry than any other people in that early period, for teeth filled with gold have been found in the mouths of mummies, indicating their advanced ideas. These people were the first to supply artificial substitutes in the mouth. Belzoni and others have found artificial teeth made of sycomore wood in ancient sarcophagi. The mode of fastening was by ligatures or bands of cord or gold wire, tying the substitute to its natural neighbours. In 1885 some specimens of prehistoric dentistry were brought to this country by an English dentist of Liverpool. One was a gold plate with several human teeth attached. The specimens were found in an Etruscan tomb. The plate was ingeniously made, and I was surprised to see gold used for a base by such an ancient people. Archæological research may yet reveal things that will teach this generation. We modify, but must not flatter ourselves that we originate, all there is in dental art. Ancient Greece is renowned as the "nursery of modern medicine." Hippocrates made a special study of the teeth. Aristotle (B.c. 300) also wrote extensively about them. Several Greek dentil operators are mentioned as early as B.C. 800.

These historic facts are mentioned that the reader may see that due importance was attached to the preservation of the teeth and the reconstruction of them even in that remote period. During the mediæval period progress was made by men

HAY'S HOP ALE ESSENCE & AERATED HOP ALE.

"Since Mr. HAY, the well-known Manufacturing Chemist, of Hull, surprised the Pharmaceutical world, some ten years since, by the production of what, until then, had been thought an impossibility, viz., a perfectly soluble and transparent ESSENCE OF GINGER, nothing he has done has attracted so much attention in this direction as his latest ESSENCE OF HOPS, which, like his OTHER ESSENCES, is a production, unique in itself. The HOP ALE made from this Essence, evolves a DELICIOUS AROMA OF HOPS, and supplies that much longed-for desideratum of abstainers,

'A GLASS OF NON-ALCOHOLIC BEER.'

We have always felt that teetotallers laboured under a disadvantage, that ought not to exist, in having no really decent beverage, IN THE PLACE OF WINE AND BEER. By this Pharmaceutical triumph of Mr. HAY, this difficulty has been overcome, and it affords us much pleasure to commend this truly TEMPERANCE DRINK to the notice of abstainers and non-alcoholic abstainers alike."

Full Extract from BREWERS' JOURNAL.

HAY'S HOP ALE ESSENCE.

"Is certainly remarkable for the purity and reality of its results. Made from the choicest hops, and treated in a manner of which Mr. HAY appears to possess the monopoly, this HOP ALE ESSENCE supplies an excellent stomachic, and an agreeable stimulating SUMMER DRINK. The HOP ALE produced by this ESSENCE is of a most refreshing and invigorating character, with all the appetizing flavour and delicate aroma of its more intoxicating prototype, to which it approximates more closely than any similar preparation we have yet tasted. It may be advantageously taken up as a speciality for which a large consumption may safely be predicted."

DR. DE JONGH'S
KNIGHT OF THE ORDER OF LEOPOLD OF BELGIUM
KNIGHT OF THE LEGION OF HONOUR
LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL

THE PUREST. THE MOST PALATABLE. THE MOST DIGESTIBLE. THE MOST EFFICACIOUS.

Incontestably proved by Thirty Years' Medical Experience to be
The only Cod Liver Oil which produces the full curative effects in CONSUMPTION AND DISEASES OF THE CHEST, THROAT AFFECTION GENERAL DEBILITY, DISEASES OF THE SKIN, WASTING DISEASES OF CHILDREN, RICKETS, AND ALL SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

SELECT MEDICAL OPINIONS.

SIR G. DUNCAN GIBB, Bart., M.D.,
Physician to the Westminster Hospital.
"The value of DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL as a therapeutic agent in a number of diseases, chiefly of an exhaustive character, has been admitted by the world of medicine; but, in addition, I have found it a remedy of great power in the treatment of many Affections of the Throat and Larynx, especially in Consumption of the latter, where it will sustain life when everything else fails."

DR. SINCLAIR COGHILL,
Physician to the Royal National Hospital for Consumption, Ventnor.
"I have convinced myself that in Tubercular and the various forms of Strumous Disease, DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL possesses greater therapeutic efficacy than any other Cod Liver Oil with which I am acquainted. It was especially noted, in a large number of cases in which the patients protested they had never been able to retain or digest other Cod Liver Oil, that DR. DE JONGH'S OIL was not only tolerated, but taken readily, and with marked benefit."

JOSEPH J. POPE, Esq., M.R.C.S.,
Late Staff Surgeon, Army, Professor of Hygiene, Birkbeck Institution, London.
"I found during my Indian experience that the world and character of DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL remained unchanged by tropical heat or foreign climate, and it was, from its uniformity of character, particularly adapted for long-continued administration. The value of 'hydro-carbons' in all debilitated states of the system is now becoming thoroughly recognized; and it is, without doubt, from the animal oils and fats, rather than from their vegetable substitutes, that we may hope to derive the surest benefit. The Oil of DR. DE JONGH places in everyone's reach a reliable and valuable remedy, one that cannot be too widely recognised."

DR. R. O. CROFT,
Author of "Handbook for the Nursery."
"DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL is almost a specific in many of the Diseases peculiar to Infancy and Childhood, and I have seen marked benefit produced by its use. Patients prefer it to the Pale Oils, and are able to retain it more comfortably."

DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL is supplied ONLY in IMPERIAL Half-Pints, Pints and Quarts, sealed with BETTS'S Patent Capsule impressed on the top with DR. DE JONGH'S Stamp, and on the side with his Signature, and the Signature of ANSAR, HARFORD & Co.; and bearing under the wrapper a Label with the same Stamp and Signatures.
WITHOUT THESE MARKS NONE CAN POSSIBLY BE GENUINE.
